

Young poet makes her mark

MUSCAT: Birds at Dawn is a unique collection of poems versed by a relatively unknown child poetess, Athulya Gloria Sajimon, an 11th grade student of Indian School Ghubra. Her entry into the world of letters went as early as the age of six years when she played with letters and alphabets. Subsequently, she started penning short poems which ranged from simple expressions of family and nature to more abstract concepts of geo-politics and the heavenly realm. Her introspection on various facets of life comes through in her poignant poems in which she exhorts peace in her poem War and Peace and labels man as the cornerstone of all trouble with the environment in her poem A Chunk of Sand.
